

Original Sources for Theory and Movements

Theoretical framework and developmental movements for S'cool Moves, Margot Heinger-White, OT, Shirley Randolph, PT, and Freddie Ann Regan, PT

Chronologically Controlled Developmental Therapy, Ed Snapp, PT., www.futuresunlimited.com

Sensory Integration Techniques, Margaret Rood, RPT
Application by A. Jean Ayres, Sensory Integration and the Child, published in 1972

Founding physiotherapists specializing in Cerebral Palsy, Berte Bobath, PT and Dr. Karel Bobath, Neurologist (1950's), www.bobath.org.uk

Cross pattern movement for brain injuries, Temple Fay, MD, 1895-1963

Developmental Optometry activities, Dr. Steven Goedert, O.D. and Dr. Robert C. Pepper, O.D.

Figure 8, Dr. Newell Kephart, Slow Learner in the Classroom, 1960, 1st edition, page 182
Dr. Newell Kephart's work continues through the vision of Elizabeth Davies, Ann Davies, and Linda Thompson, www.perceptualmotor.com

Posters activities using balls, Bill Hubert, Developer of Bal-A-Vis-X, www.bal-a-vis-x.com

Pretzels, Hans G. Furth and Harry Wachs, When Thinking Goes to School, 1975
Modified by Dr. Cook and modified further by Dr. Paul Dennison of Brain Gym

© S'cool Moves, Inc., www.schoolmoves.com

S'cool Moves Main Premise

- The body learns ten times faster than the brain and forgets ten times slower. If you want to change the brain, change the body.

Modified from talk given by Dr. David Richo

Quotables!

"The mind can absorb
no more than the seat can endure."

Janet Trasli

© S'cool Moves, Inc., www.schoolmoves.com